

IRS Collections: Defending Against IRS Collections and Liens

A client comes to your office with a Notice of Intention to Levy. What should your strategy be? Can you challenge the underlying assessment? How do you deal with the IRS Automated Collection Service? With local IRS Collection Offices?

On Tuesday, January 25, 2011, M. Robinson and Company is sponsoring and organizing a free seminar at Bentley University entitled "IRS Collections: Defending Against Levies and Liens." This seminar will help you and your firm to develop an effective strategy for dealing with IRS collections. It features an experienced IRS Appeals Officer along with experienced tax attorneys and CPAs.

Our objective is to help you (1) determine a payment arrangement that IRS will likely accept; (2) assist your client with various payment arrangements, including Offers in Compromise and Installment Agreements; and (3) decide the appropriate appeals procedure if negotiations with IRS Collections are unsuccessful. You will learn:

- How to challenge the underlying assessment (tax bill) – without going to court.
- How to work effectively with the IRS Automated Collection Service.
- How to work effectively with the IRS local Collection Offices.
- How to work effectively with the Taxpayer Advocate Service.
- How to complete the Form 433F.
- How to complete the Form 656: Offer in Compromise.
- How IRS evaluates Offers in Compromise including a review of the IRS Asset/Equity Table.
- How IRS views Installment Payment Agreements.
- How to appeal the denial of an Offer in Compromise or an Installment Agreement.
- How to appeal a Notice of Intent to Levy.
- How to appeal a levy.
- How to appeal the proposed filing of a lien.
- How to request the withdrawal or subordination of a lien that has been filed

Please join us for a fresh and informative perspective on the IRS collections process.
